Their beef supidies each year come more and more from Australia. South America and the United States, with the treast beef of old England' largely produced in this country.

"Our cattlemen should cease to be 'cowboys,' and raise their cattle from the cow to the alaughter house-fewer if need be, but better—and of the kind that can be turned into money within two and a half years. It is, not so much what is done as what there is to enow for it after it is done. The beef, butter and cheese markets at large should be at the command of the United States, and Kansas ought to have a good deal to my about it. We have the climate, soil, and now with alfalfa, our conditions are complete for any competition, Produce draft horses, in prove our cattle and hogs to utilize their waste, rune sheep and no protective tariff will be needed to sustain our industries. We can discount cheap labor, cheap money and starration living, and bear all competition—but Chinese—and they must get beyond the reach of steam laundries or go with the balance. Already American enterprise is building steel bridges in English South Africa, electric street railways in the streets of London and subways under them, solding all souts of recently improved mechanical commits, and their products, all through Europe: notable, His speech was enlivened by anecdotes of that animal's perverse ways, and his facts were placed in such a witty manthe bog were thoroughly enjoyed by the nudlence.

COBURN ON THE PIG Tells Some Funny and Interesting

Things About the Porker. Mr. Coburn began his remarks by telling the old saying that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and gave a little variation to this principle when he said "all beef and no pork makes an unbalanced ration for the people of Amerila, for without both they cannot do all that is expected of them. Kansas," he said, "is prepared to supply the world with any and all kinds of meat and as juicy beef and pork as anyone would wish

"People seem to regard the hog as a reopie seem to regard the nog as a low animal," sold the speaker. But he ranks higher in some things than his two-footed friends. For if given an opportuni-ty, he is clean, unselfish and thoroughly able to take cure of himself if left to his

It was the speaker's opinion that the pig is a patented machine, fully capable of taking care of all the raw material that could be placed before it. It was self-olled and never gave out and was as reliable as any machine now to be found that has been made by man, "Corn," said he, "can be thrown into a hog if it is well bred, and it is a good investment. This patented pig can take ten bushels of corn and confine it in less space than one bushel would take, and at the same time is good, sound cash. Take a good porker and fill him with corn, and as it takes only seven pounds to make one pound of fat, that pound of fat is worth many times more in the European markets than seven pounds of corn. Mr. Porker is a condenser. Ship him to England and the freight on him would be a great deal less than the freight on the a great deal less than the freight on the orn it took to fatten him, and he would be worth more money to boot.

This patent pig is the manufacturer of many articles. He makes brushes, grease, cushions, fertilizer, rattles, side meat. sausage, souse, soap, soup, and satisfac-tion. He is a beauty and a joy forever. He raises the mortgage, sends the kids to school, buys the plane and other furni-turs, builds the house, plants the orchard and keeps it clean, and, if given a chance, will cultivate it free of charge; and whenwill cultivate it free of charge; and whenever he is not useful he is ready to go away back and sit down.

The pig is at home everywhere-in the palaces of the rich, and of lords and prin-ces, or in the hovels of the poorest. He travels in his own private car, made according to other people's ideas, however, camps with the soldiers on the battle-field under every flag, and sails with the
